CHRISTIAN POWER & LONESOME TRAIN

Australia's favourite rockabilly playboys, Christian Power & Lonesome Train, the Wollongong based trio are well known across the country and beyond, for their good time appeal with fans of all ages.

The trio play a fantastic mix of originals and classics, all cooked up to an infectious, high energy, rockabilly beat. They work as a three piece consisting of lead man, Fender endorsee and funny guy, Christian Power on guitars, the inimitable Jordan C. Thomas on the upright slap bass, and bangin' the skins, stand-up style is Rob Laurie. All three provide main and harmony vocals and terrible gags.

Christian Power & Lonesome Train can be seen playing at the country's major music and culture festivals and have also travelled the world to bring all the fun to troops serving overseas in war zones in Iraq, Afghanistan, Israel, United Arab Emirates, East Timor and Solomon Islands.

PETE DENAHY

Pete Denahy is a comedian and bluegrass musician hailing from Yackandandah in Victoria. He is a singer songwriter whose show includes everything from serious ballads to ridiculous stories and songs with a twist.

Pete wrote the 'teenager song' Sort Of Dunno Nothin', which went viral on YouTube and is seen as a Gen Y anthem.

Pete's show is popular at music festivals and connects with all ages. Pete has toured with Slim Dusty, Sara Storer, Troy Cassar-Daley, Lee Kernaghan and has worked in the Melbourne comedy scene with Akmahl Saleh, Elliot Goblet and Flacco.

Being half Japanese, Pete draws much inspiration from his late grandfather Kido Zenichi, a well respected musician in Hiroshima. In 2013, Pete travelled Japan playing bluegrass and country.
