Mole Creek* by James Dunbar (Australian Crime)

In the tiny Tasmanian town of Mole Creek, retired Australian cop and Vietnam veteran Pete McAuslan has retreated to his fishing cabin to write his memoirs. In Sydney, his grandson, journalist and trashy true crime author Xander, learns that Pete has taken his own life, begging for forgiveness in a suicide note.

Arriving in Mole Creek in the aftermath of Pete's death, Xander discovers that his grandfather's laptop is missing. He begins to suspect that something is wrong, refusing to accept the facts as presented. With the local police not interested in investigating an apparently open-and-shut suicide, Xander sets about uncovering the truth of what happened to his grandfather.

In the process, he discovers long buried secrets from Pete's time serving in the Vietnam War: secrets that Pete has withheld from him and everyone else for fifty years; secrets that powerful people would prefer to stay buried. Ensnared in a web of betrayals that began a generation before, Xander finds himself on the hitlist of a clinically violent assassin.

Now he must race to identify the connection between the seemingly unremarkable death of an old Australian soldier and the imminent reactivation of the most powerful and potentially destructive 'sleeper' in the history of espionage - before the truth catches up with him.

Even the gods themselves are restless.

A wily, charismatic bandit and vengeance-sworn son of a deposed duke cross paths as they each lead their own rebellion against the emperor's brutal regime. Together, they will journey to the heart of the Empire, witnessing the clash of armies, fleets of silk-draped airships, magical books and shapeshifting gods. Their unlikely friendship will drastically change the balance of power in Dara...but at what price?

'The Grace of Kings' is the debut novel by Hugo, Nebula, and World Fantasy Award-winner Ken Liu, and the first in the monumental epic fantasy series The Dandelion Dynasty.

Dolly's Dream* by Dilly Court (Romance)

Dolly Blanchard dreams of a bigger life. She wants to make a mark on the world, not simply wait for a husband to come along. So when an impoverished actress offers her a lifeline, Dolly flees to London, determined to make it on the stage and prove to her family - and herself - that she can strike out alone.

But the dark city streets are full of danger. With her dreams fading to dust, Dolly soon finds herself in peril. And with the family's future under threat at Rockwood Castle, and secrets tumbling out of the shadows, she faces a difficult choice.

Palace of the Drowned* by Christine Mangan (Historical/Mystery)

In Venice, Frances Croy is working to leave the previous year behind: another novel published to little success, a scathing review she can't quite manage to forget, and, most of all, the real reason behind her self-imposed exile from London - the incident at the Savoy.

Retreating to an ageing palazzo, Frankie finds comfort in the emptiness of Venice in winter, in the absence of others. Desperate to rediscover the success of her first novel, the one by which all her other work has been judged, she attempts to return to the page - ignoring the strained relationship with her best friend, the urgent phone calls from her editor and the growing fear that the end of her career is imminent.

Then Gilly appears. A precocious young admirer eager to befriend her favourite author, Gilly seems determined to insinuate herself into Frankie's solitary life. But there's something about the young woman that gives Frankie pause, that makes her wonder just how much of what Gilly tells her is the truth. Set against the catastrophic 1966 flooding of Venice, the encounters between these two women will lead to a series of lies and revelations that will tragically disrupt both of their lives.

STAFF BOOK REVIEW

A Disappearance in Fiji* by Nilima Rao

Reviewed by Sonya - Manager Library Services

'A Disappearance in Fiji' is the debut novel of Fijian Indian Australian writer Nilima Rao. Set in the Colonial era Fiji of 1914, it is a delightful murder mystery, with well-drawn characters and a real sense of place. Sergeant Akal Singh is a Sikh officer in the Suva Police, posted to the colonial backwater after a professional disgrace in Hong Kong. His senior officer hates him, he is grudgingly tolerated by his Indian colleagues, and looked down upon by the members of British and Australian society as being a 'coolie' officer – coolies being the indentured Indian workers who labour in the canefields under slave-like conditions. His only real friend is the Fijian police officer Taviti – who, as the son of an important chief, is knowledgeable about Fijian society, and moves readily through various social strata.

Singh is assigned to work the dead-end case of a coolie woman missing from a sugar cane plantation. Normally, no-one would care, but a nosy priest and a delicate political situation have focused unwanted attention on the case. Singh is dispatched to the plantation to sort it out, quickly, quietly, and without causing ripples. He is torn between a wanting to do a good job, and making his boss happy – which are mutually exclusive in this case. His presence is resented by the plantation owner and his politically ambitious wife, the local coolies want him to do something about the oppressive, filthy and dangerous conditions they are forced to work under, and the missing woman's daughter just wants to know where her mother is.

Finding out the truth (the real truth, not just a politically expedient truth) will challenge Singh's investigative skills, and force him to confront his own prejudices, and his own previous misjudgments. In the end, it may cost him his job and his life to do the right thing. This novel is a fantastic debut, with interesting characters, a plot with sufficient twists to keep the reader engaged, and an appealing setting. I don't think I have ever read anything else set in Fiji. The tropical setting and the historical time period were skillfully described. The heat, the verdant greenery, and the friendly and happy Fijian local characters all align with my memories of visiting Fiji.

I look forward to seeing more from this author.

RECYCLE YOUR BATTERIES

The library has a battery bin which means residents are able to recycle household batteries sustainably and reduce toxic waste. Batteries are a hazardous waste as they contain heavy metals and toxic cadmium, mercury and lead which can harm the environment.

They should not be thrown into rubbish bins, wheelie bins or recycle bins. Recycling batteries properly enables the lead, acid and plastic to be recovered and re-used. Any brand of AA, AAA, C, D, 9V and button cell batteries (both rechargeable and non-rechargeable) are acceptable for recycling, and can simply be placed in the battery bin located in the foyer of the library.

Tech Savvy @ Your Library

How to choose mobile phones for seniors written by Yara Khalife (for Be Connected)

If you need some help choosing your next mobile phone, you're in the right place. With so many options to choose from it can be overwhelming, so we've put together a guide on the things to keep in mind when buying a new mobile phone for seniors.

Mobile phone features to look out for

Camera: The image quality of smartphone cameras gets better with every release, but their specs do vary, so if taking quality pictures and videos is important to you then you may want to spend a bit more on a later model smartphone with higher specs.

Phone storage capacity: Your smartphone needs internal space to store data such as your photos, videos, apps and other things to help your phone run. Smartphone storage is measured in gigabytes, or GB (pronounced "gigs"), and the higher the storage, the more expensive the phone. Find out how much storage you currently have on your smartphone to give you an indication of whether you need more or less storage in your new phone. You can check on your iPhone by going to the Apple support page , or for Android phones, go to Settings and type 'storage' in the Android search bar. There are also cloud storage apps for when you need extra storage or back up for your photos, videos and documents.

Size: A large screen can make things easier to see, especially if you use your phone to browse the internet. But a large screen generally means a bigger phone, so you also need to consider how heavy it is and how it'll fit in your pocket or bag. The best thing to do is visit a store to test a selection of phones in person and get a feel for what works best for you.

Accessibility features

Accessibility features make your phone easier to use. While some of the big brand phones have built-in accessibility features to do things like increase the text size on your screen and convert voice to text, you can also find mobile phones designed for seniors. They include helpful features such as:

- * Hearing aid compatibility. Hearing aid compatible (HAC) phones have an M or T rating of 1 to 4. The higher the number the less interference you can expect when using your phone. The M rating refers to how well the phone works with hearing aids that use the Microphone setting, while the T rating refers to the Telecoil setting. You should look for a minimum M3 or T3 rating which is what most phones have.
- * Extra loud ringtone and speakerphone volume.
- * Big buttons to make the numbers easier to read.

Should I buy a mobile phone outright or on a plan?

Buying a mobile phone outright means you pay the full one-off cost of the handset so you have the freedom to choose from a wide range of providers for your data, calls and texts, known as SIM-only or BYO (bring your own) plans. The other option is to sign up to a contract which lets you pay off a handset over a fixed term (normally 12, 24 or 36 months) on top of your data, calls and texts. If you can afford to pay for a phone outright, it can keep your mobile plan costs down as there are very competitive BYO phone or SIM-only plans available.

If you need help choosing a mobile phone plan, the Australian Communications Consumer Action Network (ACCAN) website has a helpful guide. You can also use comparison websites like WhistleOut and Finder to compare phone plans.

iPhone vs Android

Today's newer smartphones run on one of two operating systems: iOS (iPhone) or Android. iOS is made by Apple and only runs on Apple devices, whereas the Android operating system is made by Google and runs on a range of phones including Samsung, Google Pixel and Oppo. If you own other devices like a tablet or laptop that run on either system, it can make things easier to stick to the same system for your smartphone. Not only will you be more familiar with the features, but the devices generally do a better job of 'talking to each other'. It's also a good idea to talk to family and friends about their experience with their phone and visit a store so you can test a few models out for yourself.

Tête Carrée

Nice, France

When is a library an art installation? When it is not only a piece of art by French sculptor Sacha Sosno (1937-2013), called Tête Carrée, but also a library building designed by architects Francis Chapus et Yves Bayard, creating a kind of inhabited artwork. On Esplanade Kennedy in the southern French city of Nice, stands what, from the distance, looks like a large cube of a building. Come closer, though, and you see that the cube is the top part of a gigantic head, raised from the ground by the neck and shoulders, standing some 100 feet tall. Inside it is a more-or-less normal library, but at night, the seemingly stone exterior is lit up by the windows of the building.
